Capital: Oklahoma City Time: GMT – 6

Background: Oklahoma is known as the "Sooner State", a reference to the settlers who arrived before the federal government officially opened the land to settlement. It was admitted to the Union on November 16, 1907, as the 46th state. Oklahoma's economy has traditionally been dominated by agriculture and mining, but by the early 1990s service industries, government, and manufacturing had grown to become the largest economic sectors. The name of the state is derived from two Choctaw words meaning "red people" and was originally proposed by a Choctaw chief in the 1860s. Its major cities are Oklahoma City (the capital), Tulsa, Lawton, Norman, and Broken Arrow.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Oklahoma had 3,145,585 inhabitants, an increase of 4 per cent over 1980. The population estimate for 1997 was 3,317,091. In 1990 the average population density was 17 people per sq km (45 per sq mi); most of the population was concentrated in the eastern half of the state. Whites made up 82.1 per cent of the population and blacks 7.4 per cent. Oklahoma has the nation's largest population of Native Americans, totalling some 252,240 individuals, or about 8 per cent of the population. Among the largest of the state's many Native American groups are the Cherokee, Chickasaw, Choctaw, Creek, and Seminole. Additional population groups included 7,320 people of Vietnamese origin, 5,193 people of Chinese ancestry, 4,717 people of Korean background, 4,546 Asian Indians, and 3,024 people of Filipino descent.

Location: Oklahoma, one of the Midwestern states of the United States, bordered on the north by Colorado and Kansas; on the east by Missouri and Arkansas; on the south by Texas; and on the west by Texas and New Mexico. The Red River forms much of the southern boundary.

Area: Oklahoma has an area of 181,048 km (69,903 sq mi); 2 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly rectangular in shape with a narrow protruding section, the Panhandle, in the north-west; its extreme dimensions are 357 km (222 mi) from north to south and 747 km (464 mi) from east to west, 269 km (167 mi) of which is formed by the Panhandle. Elevations range from 88 m (289 ft), along the Little River in the south-eastern corner of the state, to 1,516 m (4,973 ft), at the top of Black Mesa in the extreme north-west. The approximate mean elevation is 396 m (1,300 ft).

Industries: The mining industry accounts for 7 per cent of the annual gross state product, and the state ranks among the nation's leading mineral producers. Natural gas and oil make up about 95 per cent of the yearly mineral production by value. Oklahoma is also a major supplier of gypsum and the nation's sole producer of iodine. Other minerals include coal, high-grade granite, limestone, gypsum, clays, and tripoli. Farming accounts for 4 per cent of the annual gross state product. Beef cattle are the state's leading agricultural product. Leading crops are wheat, hay, cotton, peanuts, sorghum, soya beans, pecans, corn, and vegetables.

The annual income from forestry in Oklahoma is small. Commercial forests yield quantities of shortleaf and loblolly pines, sweet gum, various oaks, cottonwood, pecan, and walnut.

Manufacturing accounts for 14 per cent of the annual gross state product. Leading manufactured goods include industrial machinery, transport equipment, metal products, electronic equipment, petrochemicals, and processed foods.
