Capital: Cheyenne Time: GMT – 7

Background: Wyoming entered the Union on July 10, 1890, as the 44th state. It has a wealth of mineral and agricultural resources, and in the early 1990s mining and agriculture still played major roles in the state's economy. Tourism is also important, and each year increasing numbers of visitors are attracted by the state's unspoiled scenic wonders. Its name, taken from the Wyoming Valley of north-eastern Pennsylvania, is an Anglicized form of a Delaware term meaning "place of the big plain". Wyoming is also known as the "Equality State" and the "Cowboy State". Its major cities are Cheyenne (the capital), Casper, Laramie, Rock Springs, and Gillette.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Wyoming had 453,588 inhabitants, a decrease of 3.4 per cent from 1980; however, during the 1970s Wyoming was one of the fastest-growing states in the country. Estimates show the state population again on the upswing; the estimated population for 1997 was 479,743. The average population density in 1990 was 2 people per sq km (5 per sq mi). Whites made up 94.2 per cent of the population and blacks 0.8 per cent; additional population groups included 9,426 Native Americans and 2,806 people of Asian and Pacific Islands origin. The principal Native American groups in the state were the Shoshone and Arapaho. Approximately 25,750 people were of Latino background.

Location: Wyoming, one of the Midwestern states of the United States, bordered on the north by Montana; on the east by South Dakota and Nebraska; on the south by Colorado and Utah; and on the west by Utah, Idaho, and Montana.

Area: Wyoming has an area of 253,350 sq km (97,819 sq mi) and is the ninth-largest state in the United States; 46.5 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is rectangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are about 444 km (276 mi) from north to south and about 586 km (364 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from 945 m (3,100 ft), along the Belle Fourche River in the north-eastern corner of the state, to 4,207 m (13,804 ft), at the top of Gannett Peak in the Wind River Range. The approximate mean elevation is 2,042 m (6,700 ft).

Industries: The mining industry accounts for 23 per cent of the annual gross state product and has long been one of the state's leading industries. Leading minerals are oil, coal, natural gas, and sodium compounds. Other mineral resources include iron ore, uranium, phosphate, and clays.

Farming and ranching account for about 2 per cent of the annual gross state product. Principal livestock industries are the raising of beef cattle and sheep, and the production of dairy goods. Wyoming is a leading national producer of sheep and wool. Leading crops are hay, sugar beet, barley, and wheat.

The annual income from forestry is relatively small. Nearly all of the timber cut is softwood, and most is shipped to pulp mills in other states. Principal commercial species are lodgepole pine and Douglas fir.

Enterprises engaged in manufacturing account for only about four per cent of the annual gross state product. Leading manufactured items are oil and coal products, chemicals, industrial machinery, timber and wood products, and food products; there is also some printing and publishing.
