Capital: Olympia Time: GMT - 8

Background: Washington entered the Union on November 11, 1889, as the 42nd state. Formerly known primarily for its agricultural and forestry products, Washington had, by the early 1990s, a highly diversified economy. Although the state remained a leading national producer of such products as apples, wheat, and timber, manufacturing had become a leading sector of the economy. Tourism and other services were also important; visitors are attracted by the state's diverse scenic wonders. The state is named after George Washington. Washington is called the "Evergreen State". Its major cities are Olympia (the capital), Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma, Bellevue, and Everett.

Population: According to the 1990 census, Washington had 4,866,692 inhabitants, an increase of 17.8 per cent over 1980. In 1997 the population was estimated to be 5,610,362. The average population density in 1990 was 27 people per sq km (69 per sq mi); the distribution was very uneven, however, with more than half the state's population concentrated in the Puget Sound area. Whites made up 88.5 per cent of the population and blacks 3.1 per cent. Additional population groups included some 77,627 Native Americans, 43,799 people of Filipino descent, 34,366 people of Japanese origin, 33,962 people of Chinese ancestry, 29,697 people of Korean extraction, and 18,696 people of Vietnamese origin; approximately 214,600 people were of Latino background. Among the state's numerous Native American groups were the Yakama, Pend d'Oreille (Kalispel), Spokane, and Makah.

Location: Washington (state, United States), one of the Pacific coast states of the United States, bordered on the north by the Canadian province of British Columbia; on the east by Idaho; on the south by Oregon; and on the west by the Pacific Ocean. A series of channels in the north-west—Strait of Juan de Fuca, Haro Strait, and the Strait of Georgia—separates the state from Canada's Vancouver Island. Puget Sound deeply indents the north-western part of the state. All these bodies of water contain numerous islands that form part of the state. The Columbia River forms much of the southern boundary.

Area: Washington has an area of 182,949 sq km (70,637 sq mi); 29.6 per cent of the land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly rectangular in shape, and its extreme dimensions are 385 km (239 mi) from north to south and 607 km (377 mi) from east to west. Elevations range from sea level to 4,392 m (14,410 ft) at the top of Mount Rainier. The approximate mean elevation is 518 m (1,700 ft). Washington's coastline on the Pacific Ocean is 253 km (157 mi) long.

Industries: The mining industry accounts for less than 1 per cent of the annual gross state product. Lead, zinc, magnesium, gold, coal, sand, and gravel are the major mineral deposits. Others include diatomite, crude gypsum, lime, magnesium, olivine, and silver.

Farming accounts for nearly 3 per cent of the annual gross state product. The leading field crop is wheat; other important crops are hay, hops, potatoes, sugar beet, peas, dry beans, and flower bulbs. The leading national producer of apples, Washington is also known for its cherries, plums, grapes, pears, and blueberries. Livestock products (dairy products, cattle, and sheep) account for more than one third of the annual agricultural income.

Forestry is a major industry: the principal commercial tree species are Douglas fir and western hemlock. More than 40 per cent of the wood is used for timber, about 40 per cent is exported as roundwood, and the remainder is used for pulp and plywood.

The fishing industry is significant, although it accounts for less than 1 per cent of the annual gross state product. In value, salmon accounts for about one third of the catch, followed by oysters, crab, shrimp, and other shellfish. Other fish caught include halibut, flounder, tuna, cod, rockfish, and pollack.

Enterprises engaged in manufacturing account for 17 per cent of the annual gross state product. Leading manufacturers include transport equipment (especially aircraft and aerospace equipment), timber and wood products, paper, food products, industrial machinery, primary metals, printed materials, and precision instruments.
