Capital: Charleston Time: GMT - 5

Background: West Virginia entered the Union on June 20, 1863, as the 35th state. It was part of Virginia until the American Civil War (1861-1865), when its inhabitants, loyal to the Union, formed a separate state after Virginia became part of the Confederacy. The economy of West Virginia was principally agricultural until the late 19th century, when mining and manufacturing began to grow in importance. In the early 1990s the state was a major producer of bituminous coal, primary metals, and chemicals. It is known as the "Mountain State". Its major cities include Charleston (the capital), Huntington, Wheeling, Parkersburg, and Morgantown.

Population: According to the 1990 census, West Virginia had 1,793,477 inhabitants, a decrease of 8 per cent from 1980. The estimated population in 1997 was 1,815,787. The average population density in 1990 was 29 people per sq km (74 per sq mi). Whites made up 96.2 per cent of the population and blacks 3.1 per cent. Additional population groups included 2,385 Native Americans, 1,981 people of Asian Indian origin, and 1,606 people of Filipino descent; approximately 8,500 people were of Latino background.

Location: West Virginia, one of the eastern states of the United States, bordered on the north by Ohio and Pennsylvania; on the north-east by Maryland; on the east and south by Virginia; and on the west by Kentucky and Ohio. The Potomac River forms part of the north-eastern boundary; the Tug Fork and Big Sandy rivers form almost all of the south-western boundary; and the Ohio River forms the western and north-western boundaries.

Area: West Virginia has an area of 62,761 sq km (24,232 sq mi); 9.1 per cent of its land area is owned by the federal government. The state is roughly oval in shape, with panhandles in the north and north-east; its extreme dimensions are about 425 km (265 mi) from east to west and about 380 km (235 mi) from north to south. Elevations range from 73 m (240 ft), along the Potomac River in the north-east, to 1,482 m (4,863 ft), at the top of Spruce Knob, in the east; the approximate mean elevation is 457 m (1,500 ft), the highest of any state east of the Mississippi River.

Industries: The best-known industry is the mining of bituminous coal. The state has consistently ranked among the top two or three states in annual coal production since the early 20th century, and usually ranks among the top ten states in the annual value of its general mineral output. Apart from coal, other important minerals are oil, natural gas, limestone, salt, stone, sand and gravel, clay, and silt.

Because of its rugged topography, West Virginia is not well suited to agricultural production. Leading farm commodities include beef cattle, hay, broiler chickens, dairy products, apples, corn, and turkeys; eggs, pigs, sheep, oats, wheat, tobacco, peaches, cherries, and blackberries are also important.

Coal Train Railway tracks were first laid in West Virginia in 1853. The route ran from Cumberland, Maryland, to Wheeling in northern West Virginia. Today, three different railways cross the state. Most trains carry food products and natural resources, particularly coal. Union Pacific History. Museum Second-growth oak, yellow poplar, beech, and other hardwoods are harvested in considerable quantity. Major products from the forestry industry are hardwood, veneer logs, rustic fencing, and pulpwood.

Leading manufacturing industries include the production of primary metals (notably iron, steel, and aluminium), glass, pottery, industrial machinery, printed materials, wood products, processed food, electronic equipment, and clothing and textiles.
